Light for Our City

February 25, 2010

Dear Jason,

Did you receive a copy of Logos' new quarterly newsletter in your home or business mailbox? The newest Oak Leaf features articles about urban Christian education in York. If you didn't receive a copy, visit Logos' website to view a PDF version. Logos has some extra copies available for businesses, churches, and other organizations. Contact Michele Baker, or 717-848-9835, to request copies and to add your address to the mailing list.

Join us for the Theatre Arts Gala

Logos Middle School students will be performing two plays for audiences on Friday, March 26 at 6:30 p.m., and Saturday, March 27 at 1 p.m.

"After Hours," by Kevin Stone, takes place in a small clothing shop. Late at night two mannequins stretch and relax after a long day of modeling clothing and "ugly" hand bags. Their regular routine is interrupted by two burglars who are set on finding anything in the store of value. While Harry the night guard is walking outside, the mannequins take matters into their own hands to protect the clothing store.

"The Old Cookie Shop," by Joe M. Charles, presents quite the dilemma when poor

Nellie O'Grady cannot pay the mortgage on her cookie shop. With her mother sick and business looking down, she has no choice but to marry the Evil Mortimer Whiplash who owns the shop and will accept no other payment. But wait, the man who has come to take away the shop is none other than H. Harry Goodwell (the H stands for handsome by the way). Will the cookie shop and everything that is important to Nellie be lost?

Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for students. Hope to see you there!
