Light for Our City

March 25, 2010

Dear Jason,

Celebrate with us!

Logos is proud to announce that 8th grader Adin Brubaker has won the YorkCounts "What Makes York County a Great Place to Live" essay contest. Adin will accept his award at the annual YorkCounts Summit tomorrow and will receive a $250 savings bond.

We are thrilled to see that our students are excited about York County and its future. Part of Logos' vision is to empower students through a Gospel-centered, classical education to become tomorrow's leaders. With our students' enthusiasm for York, Logos is looking forward to a flourishing community in years to come.

Reserve your seat today!

Logos Middle School students will be performing two plays for audiences tomorrow and Saturday. Performances will be March 26 at 6:30 p.m. and March 27 at 2 p.m. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for students. Call 717-846-4448 for tickets.

"After Hours," by Kevin Stone, takes place in a small clothing shop. Late at night two mannequins stretch and relax after a long day of modeling clothing and "ugly" hand bags. Their regular routine is interrupted by two burglars who are set on finding anything in the store of value. While Harry the night guard is walking outside, the mannequins take matters into their own hands to protect the clothing store.

"The Old Cookie Shop," by Joe M. Charles, presents quite the dilemma when poor Nellie O'Grady cannot pay the mortgage on her cookie shop. With her mother sick and business looking down, she has no choice but to marry the Evil Mortimer Whiplash who owns the shop and will accept no other payment. But wait, the man who has come to take away the shop is none other than H. Harry Goodwell (the H stands for handsome by the way). Will the cookie shop and everything that is important to Nellie be lost?
